VANDALIA — Competitive livestock judging and showmanship, plus talks and demonstrations on the fitting, grooming, and showing of animals, will highlight a livestock field day that will be hosted by the Vandalia 4-H club on the Porterville Fair grounds Saturday, March 27, starting at 9:30 a.m.

Participating will be the Vandalia, Lodi, and Bishop Peaks 4-H clubs, the latter from San Luis Obispo; and three Future Farmer chapters — Porterville, Wasco, and Clovis.

Talks and demonstrations will be given by Oren Mobley, of Fresno State college; Tom McCord, field man for the American Hereford association, and Gary Reed, a former champion showman.

Calibre of the 4-H and FFA members who will be in Porterville for the event is indicated by the fact that Lodi club members had both the champion and reserve champion steer, and were showmanship winners at last year's California State fair, while a member of the club, Ricky Mendonca, was second-place showman at the National Shorthorn contest in Kentucky.

Editorial Comment

RISKY ILLUSIONS

In the wake of the collapse of Rolls Royce British Prime Minister Edward Heath spoke to his fellow countrymen in a very philosophical way about the dangers inherent in some illusions under which individuals, groups and governments too often labor. In his words a great many of us can find food for thought:

"Management must rid itself of the illusion that it can go on indefinitely running a business in conditions that don't pay.

"Unions must rid themselves of the illusion that they can go on indefinitely demanding higher wages without any concern for the effect on the firm or the industry, and without any regard to the prices its customers will have to pay.

"Governments must rid themselves of the illusion that you can find the way to prosperity by pouring out the taxpayers' money in perpetual subsidies for uneconomical ventures.

"All of us must rid ourselves of the illusion that we can buy our way out of the problems of today by mortgaging the future. It seems the easy way out—but we know now it is the fatal way."

In each of these groups are many who are not deluded, and show it in their efforts to divert the fatal trend. May their numbers increase.

The Farm Tribune
March 16, 1961

Bob Nuckols, center on the 1960 Porterville high school football team, has been selected to play in the annual Senior Charity game in Bakersfield on June 29.

Believe it or not, but Cyrille Faure has an artesian well a couple of hundred yards south of the road intersection at Fountain Springs. Flow from the well is not exactly flooding the canyon, but is enough for stock water.

A new Kill-Em-With-Kindness approach by members of the Women's Improvement Society was in obvious evidence last Thursday when the Bearded Wonders met at the city hall. The gentler, fairer and weaker sex had prepared a most sumptuous buffet supper in the lobby of the building and most graciously offered baked chicken sandwiches, cake, punch, tea, cold watermelon and cigars. Fearing a female plot, the Bearded Wonders were a bit standoffish at first but strategy of the moment seemed to be that if they were trapped in some mysterious manner, the best approach was to eat their way out. Which they did. In the group of lovely ladies were Eleanor Jones, Zoe Claubes, Judy Pratt, Bea Masterson, Betty Scott, Elizabeth Green, and Kay Rodgers. The Bearded Wonders finally decided to go on with their meeting, interrupted only occasionally by the beating of a bass drum by one of the ladies in the hall, voting to name their group "The Mystic Knights of the Supreme Order of Bush Faces," SOB's for short. Officers seated included: Carroll Simmons, Supreme Centennial Bush Face; Milt Wenzel, most excellent mutton chops; Dutch Schmid, master of the mustache cup; Fred Lewis, most loyal handlebar; Davis Harp, wielder of the quill; L.W. Futrell, secretary, ways and means (of getting some loot); Robert Natzke, high mogul of the ritual committee; Gene "Doc Small" Duncan, ruler of the ways and means committee; and Col. Bill Horst, ramrod of the charter committee. After setting the next meeting date, the Mystic Knights adjourned to the Mountain Lion saloon, the lovely ladies, meanwhile, having taken their empty dishes and gone home, as lovely ladies should.

Lemon Orchard Has First Mealybugs On Citrus In The State

PORTERVILLE — Comstock mealybug has recently been found infesting a lemon orchard near Porterville according to a report prepared by the Pest Control department of Sunkist Growers, Inc. This is the first time the pest has been found on citrus in California.

Mealybug, first discovered on shade trees in Porterville in August, 1967, has three or four generations per year, resulting in large summer and fall broods which suck plant juices from leaves, twigs, and branches.

Actual destructiveness of this pest to citrus is not known, as information from citrus growers is sparse. It is known that the eggs are deposited on tree trunks and soil crevices in frothy white masses and hatch the following spring.

An attempt was made to establish parasites for control of the Porterville infestation by the U.S. Department of Agriculture, University of California biological control specialists, and State of California Entomology personnel, but weather conditions in the area proved to be too severe for the control agents to survive.

The State Department of Agriculture's Bureau of Entomology is now making a study to determine if an eradication attempt or further pursuit of a biological control program would be more feasible.

We hope you planted a lot of green things on Saint Patrick's Day. Old Saint Patrick really enjoyed that color and if you didn't have time Wednesday there are several green things you can plant this Saturday. There are also some pink and red things if you would rather upset tradition.

This just has to be the best time of the year for planting because the weather is right and the plants really have an excellent start. What is more important the root system develops best now that the soil is cool and you soon have a well established plant.

The pink and red colors that can be planted are camellias and azaleas. Many camellias are at the peak of their bloom and many azaleas are just now starting. You can come in and select the color you want from the actual bloom. This takes all the sport out of it but does guarantee you get the color you want.

Another fine plant is the Daphne. These have very fragrant flowers along with pretty leaves. Daphne does best in the shade and should not be over watered. It helps sometimes to grow them in a container where you can neglect them a bit. You're welcome to have a look at Daybell's on "E" Street north of Olive.

OLIVE STREET IMPROVEMENT PLANS SUBMITTED TO STATE FOR APPROVAL

PORTERVILLE — Plans to widen and improve Olive street from Freeway 65 to H street were submitted Monday by the city of Porterville to the State Division of Highways, for final approval.

City Engineer Wayne Harris said he anticipates that approval will be given, in time for advertisement for bids to start April 20.

The city of Porterville is to be the prime engineering and contracting agent, and will assume construction costs within the city limits. The county of Tulare is to furnish construction inspection and administration, and will assume costs outside the city limits.

Project cost, approximately $460 thousand, will cover widening Olive from 60 feet to 110 feet, increasing it to four lanes, adding street lights, traffic signals, storm drains, and underground wiring.

County portion of the project will be approximately $204 thousand, city portion $257,500, and the state will supply $110 thousand to be divided between county and city. Southern California Edison company will supply underground wiring, marblelight, and luminaire for street lights within the city.

Edison company and Pacific telephone are removing all transmission poles along Olive. and Southern California Gas company will be installing a new six-inch, high-pressure gas line.

Right-of-way costs were a separate item from construction costs, and amounted to $265 thousand for the city and approximately $300 thousand for Tulare county.

WILFRED VEGA, upper left photo, looks over a natural spring that he plans to develop to provide domestic water on a 15-20 acre site on the Tule River Indian reservation that he expects to develop as a public camp ground for persons who want to relax in a "roughing it sort of way" in the Sierra. Other photos show the general area in which Vega plans to place several cabins, camp sites, and parking areas for vehicles; and a group of children playing in the south fork of the Tule river that borders one side of the site - Veronica and Francine Garfield,

Teresa Burrough, Tammy Byars, Raymond, Ronald, Matthew, Marty and Julie Carabay, and Paschal Christman. The site is about a one and a half hour drive from Porterville, through the Indian reservation, and just across the river from the old McDonald logging camp. (Farm Tribune photo)

Wilfred Vega Plans Camp Site Development On Reservation

Development of a public camp site on the Tule River Indian Reservation where Tom Wheaton raised vegetables, corn, beans and watermelons nearly a century ago is being planned by Wilfred Vega, whose former wife is a granddaughter of Wheaton.

Vega, who is of Indian descent and who lives and runs cattle on the reservation, visualizes the development as one of several potentials on the reservation that could bring additional income to reservation Indians.

"I'm not talking about something big and fancy," Vega says. "I plan to move three or four cabins from the old McDonald logging camp just across the river, fix them up a little, and make them available to people who want to get out into the hills, but who maybe like a few conveniences."

In addition, he plans to build fireplaces, camp sites and vehicle parking areas - all under the shade of the many trees on the property - also a corral from which horses could be rented.

With the south fork of the Tule river bordering the property, trout fishing (with a tribal permit) would be available, and although deer hunting is not allowed on the reservation, except by Indians, the site is only a mile or so from the reservation line, beyond which there is excellent hunting possibilities, and also fishing without a permit.

As for recreation for weekend - or longer - campers, the old Paddy Smith mill is only a pleasant horseback ride, or hike, away; the historic Peyron Redwood grove, site of the old Celestino Peyron sheep camp, later used by Fred Peyron, a valley farmer and livestock man who ran sheep on and around the reservation in the summer, is about two miles "up the mountain."

Other Redwood groves, old logging camps, and mining locations are in the area.

Domestic water for the 15-20 acre camp site would come through pipelines from a natural spring on the property that Vega plans to develop. It was this year-around spring that provided irrigation water for the Wheatons when they farmed the land.

"This is beautiful country," Vega says. "At about 4,000 feet elevation, the summer climate is pleasant. It's a place where families could relax and enjoy themselves."

Vega, who was born in Porterville near a fertilizer plant where his father worked, located in about the area where the new Standard Register building is now being constructed, tells of the "big pink beans" that the Wheaton family used to grow on the proposed camp site.

"These beans were something special, there were no others like them. Even in the days when money was not plentiful, they brought a premium from the Hallford and Belton families in Porterville - selling for as much as $20 a sack."

"The beans were thrashed by women and children who whipped them with branches, then tossed them on canvas or in baskets, so that the hulls and other light material would blow away. Along with vegetables, corn and melons, the beans were packed out of the hills to the reservation headquarters, then brought by wagon to Porterville where they were sold."

As for modern times, Vega sees development possibilities similar to his on other areas of the reservation - perhaps in some of the Redwood groves. And in connection with clearing hill land by bulldozer to create better cattle range, he believes there is a potential in piling brush to improve habitat for quail.

"The tribal permit system for fishing on the reservation, coupled with the planting of trout, is bringing in many fishermen," he says. "A similar program could be developed for bird hunters."

And with the opening of a new tribal store a few months ago, groceries and some fishing tackle is now available on the reservation. Larger stock of items used by visitors would be possible if demand increased, Vega believes.

Vega's proposed camp development is about 15 miles above the reservation store, and about 10 miles above the reservation lumber mill. Much of the road, which goes across the mountains to Rogers camp and Camp Nelson, was originally built by loggers some 25-30 years ago, and offers no serious maintenance problems for summer travel, at least as far as the Vega camp site.

Frost Damage Still Difficult To Assess In Fruit Orchards

PORTERVILLE — Damage extent by frost to orchards is still difficult to assess according to James LaRue, Tulare county farm advisor.

"It seems certain," said LaRue, "that severe damage to opening buds and flowers of some varieties of fruit such as almonds and apricots may be the result." He added that the more advanced the bloom or young developing fruit, the more susceptible they are to frost damage but added that "at this time all we can do is wait."

Alfalfa Weevil Damaging Fields In Tulare County

PORTERVILLE — Egyptian Alfalfa Weevil larvae are approaching damaging populations in alfalfa fields in all areas of Tulare county.

The number of larvae in alfalfa is increasing rapidly, hence, growers should check their fields two to three times a week and be prepared to control this pest to avoid extensive damage, reports Tulare County Farm Advisor William Sallee.

Growers and insecticide personnel are welcome to direct questions to the Tulare county farm and home advisors office, County Civic center, Agricultural building, Woodland drive and West Main street, Visalia, or phone 209-732-5511, extension 452 when confronted with a problem with this pest.

Opposes Horse Drugging

SACRAMENTO — Use of drugs and medications on horses involved in shows, performance competition, or organized sales would be forbidden under a bill recently introduced in the state legislature by Assemblyman Gordon Duffy. The bill also provides that managers of such events would collect 20 cents per horse for the Department of Agriculture fund.

FIELD DAY

has won the club group two years in a row at the Junior Cow Palace in San Francisco, and members of the Vandalia club have shown champion animals at the Cow Palace and the State fair.

The Wasco Future Farmer chapter, also the Clovis chapter, are consistently strong competitors at the Junior Cow Palace; Wasco teams are also top contestants at the Great Western in Los Angeles. And over a long period of years, the Porterville FFA chapter has produced strong beef showmen.

Orosi Man Invents 12 mph Cultivator

OROSI — An Orosi man has invented a "high speed rolling cultivator" which, he says, eliminates hand hoeing, works within one inch of a plant without damage to the plant, and stays on the proper path at 12 miles per hour, even if the tractor strays a bit.

Paul Bezzerides says he designed the machine to accommodate a variety of row crops, including cotton, sugar beets, lettuce, broccoli, cabbage, and others. He adds that the cultivator reduces the need for large numbers of workers while eliminating some of the physically more difficult chores.

First on the morning program will be judging contests with classes in beef, hogs and lambs. The contests are open and both individual and team awards will be given.

Showmanship contest for team championships will put five-member teams from the clubs in competition. All contestants will draw for animals that will be furnished by Vandalia 4-H members. A specified amount of time will be given to prepare the animals for showmanship competition; each contestant is to furnish his own show gear.

Steers for the judging contest will be furnished by Porterville FFA members, under direction of Ray Kennedy, head of the vocational agriculture department at Porterville high school; sheep and yearling ewes will be brought in by Dick Harward, Porterville breeder; hogs by W.E. Moench, Terra Bella breeder.

Awards will be for both teams and individuals; trophies and ribbons will be furnished by Mineral King Savings and Loan association of Porterville and Visalia.

An individual showmanship contest will be held immediately after team championships, with anyone from any club eligible to enter. Tulare county entrants are urged to bring their own animals if possible.

Following the day's activities, Vandalia 4-H will host all team contestants and their leaders at dinner; Saturday night, team members from San Luis Obispo and Lodi will be guests in the homes of Vandalia club members.

Special activities are also planned for high-school-age 4-H members, with Nanci Carter, Vandalia club president, in charge of arrangements. Visitors will meet at 9 a.m., March 28, at the Vandalia school, to depart for home.

AFTER HAVING been run out of the Mountain Lion saloon last Friday night by irate lovely ladies before a wagonmaster for the 1971 Jackass Mail could be selected, ex-wagonmasters, and assorted hangerson are determined to bring confusion out of chaos tomorrow night, Friday, and forthwith announce the distinguished leader for the Mail run on March 27. While aforementioned ex-wagonmasters are making up their minds, if any, there will be festivities of a sort inside the Mountain Lion, and certain artists of renown will perform in instrumental concert. Even though members of the non-existent Jackass Mail committee are, as usual, failing to function, sale of Jackass Mail stamps has been more than brisk, and it appears a record load of mail will leave Porterville by Jackass Mail wagon for Springville come the morning of March 27. Stamps can be purchased at the Porterville chamber of commerce office and at various emporiums in Springville and Porterville.
